

Baldwin sees bulk of funding coming from individuals in first months of 2017

Posted on Tuesday, Apr 25, 2017

U.S. Sen. Tammy Baldwin saw nearly 94 percent of her total funding coming from individual contributions over the first three months of the year.

Meanwhile, around $138,000 of the Madison Dem's total $2.2 million in contributions came from committees, according to her quarterly report filed with the Federal Election Commission.

From Jan. 1 to March 31, Baldwin spent some $820,000, leaving her roughly $2.5 million cash on hand as she gears up for a re-election bid next year.

Of the money from committees, the largest was a $39,000 contribution from Washington, D.C.'s Senate IMPACT: WI & ND, which also contributed the same sum to North Dakota Sen. Heidi Heitkamp. Most committee funding came from outside Wisconsin, including a total of $10,000 from the Los Angeles-based Women's Political Committee, $5,000 from D.C.-based Miller Coors LLC PAC and $5,000 from Springfield, Illinois' Prairie PAC.

Money from Wisconsin-based committees included:

*$2,500 from AO Smith Corporation PAC in Milwaukee;

*$1,000 from Marinette Marine Corp PAC based in Marinette;

*And $1,000 from American Family Mutual Insurance CO in Madison.

See Baldwin's report, which is more than 2,200 pages:

<http://docquery.fec.gov/pdf/206/201704200200118206/201704200200118206.pdf>