Washington, D.C. - Governor Scott Walker spoke to members of the House Republican Conference at the United States Capitol today and urged members to “go big and bold” as they pursue their agenda.

“Actions speak louder than words,” Governor Walker said. “In 2011, we went big and bold in Wisconsin and rejected the status quo, and now, our state has quickly emerged as a national reform leader. My message to House Republicans is to be positive and go big and bold when delivering on their promises to the American people.”

Governor Walker spoke to the House Republican Conference today at the invitation of House Speaker Paul Ryan. The Governor is in Washington, D.C. to advocate for the people of Wisconsin as the federal government pursues reform in a number of areas.
