Senator Steve Nass (R-Whitewater) issued the following statement regarding the release of proposals from the Senate Republican Caucus to move the 2017-19 state budget process forward towards completion:

“Senate Republicans are working to resolve the remaining issues on transportation, K-12 education and taxes. We are debating serious policy issues with our colleagues in the State Assembly and also working to meet the fiscal priorities established by Governor Scott Walker. In the end, I will support a budget that protects middle class families by addressing their tax burden and continues to force state and local governments to adopt operational reforms.”
