MILWAUKEE — Sen. Ron Johnson (R-Wis.) released a new episode of his podcast, “Hey, Wisconsin,” on Thursday featuring a discussion with participants in the Joseph Project who now have a steady job thanks to the work of Pastor Smith of Greater Praise Church of God in Christ and Senator Johnson.

Sen. Johnson interviewed three participants in the Joseph program who are now employed at Nematik, an auto-parts manufacturer near Sheboygan. Michael, Willie and Jasmine talk about their experience moving up in management, and about how Michael’s son thinks he is a “superhero” because he wears a blue uniform to work. Learn more about the Joseph Project and the good it is doing for many Wisconsin families here.

Sen. Johnson’s podcast addresses a variety of issues – connecting what happens in Washington to Wisconsinites. The podcast is available to download and share here.
