

Walker names campaign manager

Posted on Friday, May 12, 2017

Gov. Scott Walker today announced Joe Fadness as his campaign manager as he continues to send signs that he will run for re-election next year.

Walker has said he will wait until after the budget is done to make a formal announcement on whether he'll seek a third term, but he has continued to drop hints about his intentions. Yesterday, he tweeted, “#TBT to our first campaign to move WI forward. We’ve come a long way. We’re not done yet.” #TBT refers to throw back Thursday.

Walker called Fadness, a former state party executive director, a “trusted member” of his team.

“As I finalize my decision, having a campaign manager as skilled and bright as Joe putting together a team and building the infrastructure necessary for victory gives me even greater faith that we can continue to move Wisconsin forward,” Walker said in a statement released through the state GOP.

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

Fadness, who was executive director for the state GOP from 2013-2015, has worked with Walker since the gov's days as Milwaukee County exec.