

Baldwin outraises Vukmir in final reporting period, has 2-to-1 cash advantage

Posted on Friday, Oct 26, 2018

U.S. Sen. Tammy Baldwin again outraised opponent Leah Vukmir, pulling in $1.6 million to the Brookfield Republican's $808,558 over the most recent reporting period.

Baldwin, D-Madison, also spent nearly $4.2 million between Oct. 1-17 and had almost $2.5 million in the bank at the end of the pre-general period.

Vukmir, meanwhile, spent more than $1.1 million and had $1.1 million cash on hand to close out the period.

The reports, filed with the Federal Elections Commission yesterday, will be the last ahead of the Nov. 6 midterms.

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

They show Baldwin now has receipts of $31.1 million since the day after her 2012 election and net expenditures of $28.1 million.

Vukmir, has $5.2 million in receipts since she got into the race in September 2017 and $4.1 million in net expenditures.