

Baldwin says she raised $1.2 million in pre-primary period

U.S. Sen. Tammy Baldwin's campaign says she raised nearly $1.2 million between July 1-25.

But the campaign did not provide figures for cash on hand or money spent over the pre-primary period.

The Madison Dem's fundraising total for the period exceeds the just more than $1 million GOP U.S. Senate contender Kevin Nicholson pulled in over the second quarter of the year. It also outpaces fellow Republican candidate state Sen. Leah Vukmir's $668,788 raised from April to June.

For comparison, in the 2016 election cycle, former U.S. Sen. Russ Feingold over the same period brought in $780,000.
