

Vinehout vows to put people above corporate interests

Posted on Saturday, Jun 2, 2018

Dem gubernatorial candidate Kathleen Vinehout vowed to put people first over corporate interests, illustrating the state's $3 billion Foxconn deal as being equal to a path of $100 bills stretching from Racine to San Francisco.

Instead of protecting corporate interests, Vinehout said she's for people like Rachel, a woman in Racine who works 40 hours per week on minimum wage. She said it would take Rachel a lifetime of working just to walk a mile on a path of $100 bills.

"After a lifetime of working, from 16 to age 70, Rachel will be less than a mile down the street she lives on. Our priorities are upside down," she said.

Vinehout vowed to reflect her commitment to working Wisconsinites through the state budget, providing healthcare for families, affordable tuition and clean water. She also touted accessible public transit, reinvesting in the UW System and addressing climate change.

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

This post is part of our coverage of the 2018 state Dem convention in Oshkosh. See the rest of our coverage here: <https://www.wispolitics.com/category/dem-convos/>