

New super PAC TV ad hits Baldwin as 'radically out of touch' on abortion

Posted on Friday, Oct 5, 2018

Wisconsin Next, the super PAC supporting GOP candidate Leah Vukmir, is up with a new TV ad that slams U.S. Sen. Tammy Baldwin, D-Madison" as "radically out of touch" on abortion.

The group's latest filing with the FEC shows a $150,000 expenditure for a TV buy and $10,361 for ad production. Wisconsin Next said that is for the initial buy, but declined to provide other details.

The narrator opens the spot saying, "It's called partial-birth abortion" as the ad shows an infant. The narrator goes on to say the "tiny legs, body and arms" are delivered of a young child, who has a heartbeat and the ability to feel pain.

"Then its life is ended," the narrator says as the screen goes black.

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

The narrator then adds Baldwin voted repeatedly to allow partial-birth abortions and even supported "the unthinkable," abortion for gender selection.

"Tammy Baldwin, she's radically out of touch," the narrator says to close the spot.