Brookfield, Wis. — After immediately announcing opposition to Judge Brett Kavanaugh and refusing to do her job and meet with him before his Senate hearing, Senator Tammy Baldwin owes it to Wisconsinites to say whether she agrees with Senator Cory Booker's unethical decision Thursday to release confidential records about racial profiling.

"Senator Baldwin let Wisconsinites down by refusing to do her job and meeting with Judge Kavanaugh before his hearing. Voters deserve to know if she agrees with Booker's unethical decision to release confidential documents," said Leah Vukmir campaign manager Jess Ward. "Given Senator Booker knows his actions risked expulsion from the Senate, Baldwin needs to tell Wisconsinites if she will hold her far-left ally accountable for releasing this private information."
