Former lobbyist for far-left group moves to Wisconsin for run for office.

[Madison, WI] — D.C. Dan Kohl, a former lobbyist for a far-left group in Washington, has moved back to Wisconsin to try and steal a congressional seat. He's an extreme liberal with a record in Washington to back it up. Meanwhile, Glenn Grothman is continuing to fight for Wisconsin taxpayers and hard-working families — cutting federal spending and reducing regulations to help create more jobs.

“D.C. Dan left our state behind to go lobby the swamp – he's a Washington insider entrenched in D.C. politics,” said Alec Zimmerman, spokesman for the Republican Party of Wisconsin. “While Glenn Grothman is fighting for the hard-working taxpayers of the 6th Congressional District, Kohl has spent the better part of the last decade in D.C. supporting a liberal policy agenda, like the failed Iran Deal. Kohl hasn't spent enough time in Wisconsin yet to realize just how out-of-touch he is with the voters of our state.”

D.C. Dan Kohl - Washington Insider Moving Back to Wisconsin

- D.C. Dan left Wisconsin years ago and founded the far-left group “J Street” to push a failed foreign policy agenda, including the Iran Deal.
 - The group is funded by liberal mega donor George Soros, and contributes overwhelmingly to liberal candidates – giving Democrats over $10 million since 2008 while only contributing $30,000 to Republicans.
- D.C. Dan was also heavily involved in financing Hillary Clinton's campaign in 2016 – bundling tens-of-thousands of dollars for her campaign.
- Before launching his campaign in 2017, D.C. Dan hadn't voted in Wisconsin since 2009.
