(Hudson, WI) – New Politics today endorsed Jason Church for U.S. Congress to represent Wisconsin’s Seventh Congressional District. A national organization, New Politics is dedicated to electing service leaders to all levels of government.

New Politics recruits and supports leaders who have devoted their lives to serving their country, either through the military or national service. Their endorsements provide strategic advising and training for a candidate’s campaign, including fundraising and communications. New Politics helped their endorsed candidates raise over $7 million in 2018.

“Jason is a living embodiment of the service, sacrifice, and courageous servant leadership the people of Northern Wisconsin deserve,” said Emily Cherniack, Executive Director and Founder of New Politics. “Jason knows precisely what it means to put country over self. We have no doubt he will lead with courage and integrity when he reaches Congress, and we are thrilled to endorse him in his race to get there.”

Jason Church said, “My time in uniform taught me that no vision is too lofty when folks set aside their differences and unite together behind a common cause. I’m honored to have this endorsement from the New Politics team, and I look forward to joining them in our shared mission of restoring faith in our government.”
