(Hudson, WI) – Senator Joni Ernst (R-IA) today endorsed Jason Church to represent Wisconsin’s 7th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives. Ernst and Church are both Army veterans and conservative Republicans looking to drain the swamp in Washington.

“Serving in the military is perhaps the best preparation for fighting the D.C. machine,” said Senator Joni Ernst. “Jason and I depended on our conservative Midwest values while making the tough decisions in combat. Growing up in the heartland, we both learned that hard work, determination, and care for others are the ideals that make our country great. These might not always be the ethics of Washington, but that’s why we need a fellow outsider like Jason serving in Congress. He is a principled conservative who will fight for our farmers, protect the sanctity of life, and defend the Second Amendment for the people of Wisconsin.”

“I’m very grateful for the support of fellow Army veteran, Senator Joni Ernst,” said Jason Church. “Senator Ernst is a terrific example of service and conservative leadership. We both see the economic potential for our farmers and rural communities under President Trump, and I will do everything I can to support the administration’s efforts. I look forward to joining her in the fight to make fair trade deals for our farmers and support our military and veterans.”
