(Hudson, WI) – Senator Tom Cotton (R-AR) endorsed Jason Church to represent Wisconsin’s 7th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives. Both Senator Cotton and Church are Army veterans who served in Afghanistan.

“Jason Church’s service to our country cannot end on the battlefield,” said Senator Tom Cotton. “His commitment to the American people and, most importantly, to conservative values is needed in Washington, D.C. As infantrymen, Jason and I both led men and women on dangerous missions, and we know the tough decisions that come with that responsibility. I know that Jason can make the hard choices in Congress on behalf of the people of Wisconsin.”

“I am very grateful for the support of a fellow soldier, Senator Tom Cotton,” said Jason Church. “Tom provides a great example of what veteran, conservative leadership looks like in Washington. I look forward to joining Senator Cotton in D.C. as we fight to keep our country great and stand with President Trump. Running for Congress was never my original goal, but I always envisioned serving the American people. Wisconsin doesn’t need another politician; it needs a public servant who will defend our nation’s borders, support our military, and protect our constitutional rights.”
