MADISON — Gov. Tony Evers proclaimed April as ‘Sexual Assault Awareness Month’ throughout the state of Wisconsin.

In an official proclamation, Gov. Evers noted that one in three women and one in six men in Wisconsin will experience sexual violence in their lives at some point. He also noted that one in 10 children will be sexually abused before they turn 18.

“It’s important to increase awareness of sexual violence and how it affects everyone,” Gov. Evers said. “We must continue to work together to prevent sexual violence while providing pathways to recovery for survivors.”

Gov. Evers’ proclamation also notes that women of color are historically marginalized and disproportionately affected by sexual violence.

‘Sexual Assault Awareness Month’ in Wisconsin is being recognized along with National Sexual Assault Awareness Month.
