

Neubauer raised $866,000 over last six weeks

Posted on Monday, Mar 25, 2019

Supreme Court candidate Lisa Neubauer pulled in $866,030 over the last six weeks, pushing her total raised for the campaign to $1.7 million.

Neubauer had $615,436 in the bank as of March 18 for the final push in her race with fellow Appeals Court Judge Brian Hagedorn.

A copy of Neubauer's cover sheet for the pre-election period shows she spent $966,182 between Feb. 5 and March 18. She also continued to list a $250,000 personal loan she gave the campaign.

Fundraising reports for the pre-election period are due today. Hagedorn's campaign hadn't yet released his latest numbers.

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

Neubauer has raised significantly more than Justice Rebecca Dallet did at the same point a year ago as she won an open seat on the court. The then-Milwaukee County judge had raised just more than $1 million through the pre-election period ahead of her win over Sauk County Judge Michael Screnock. He had raised just less than $800,000 for his campaign to that point.