

After “Safer at Home” dismissed, Wisconsin will see a patchwork approach to reopening

Posted on Thursday, May 14, 2020

The state Supreme Court struck down Governor Evers’ “Safer at Home” order, ruling that lawmakers should have had oversight of the process. Evers slammed the court for overturning the order and undercutting progress made in managing COVID-19. WisPolitics.com President Jeff Mayers and Stephanie Hoff discuss what comes next for Wisconsin including local regulations, safety guidelines and the governor’s public health emergency order.
