

Appeals court upholds GOP law placing restrictions on early voting in long-watched case

Posted on Tuesday, Jun 30, 2020

Today's Midday podcast features of a unanimous federal appeals court upholding a series of GOP-authored election laws — including restrictions on early, in-person voting — and ruling while the changes were designed to give Republicans a political advantage, they are nonetheless constitutional.