Today, Biden for President* Deputy Campaign Manager and Communications Director Kate Bedingfield released the following statement on Vice President Pence's trip to Wisconsin:

"As Wisconsin surges past 200,000 coronavirus cases and hospitalizations continue to climb, the Trump Administration has made perfectly clear that they have given up on their most important job: beating the virus. The stunning admission reflects what we've seen throughout this pandemic — for months, President Trump has peddled lies, waved the white flag of defeat, and wished the virus away. And today, eight months into this crisis, he still has no plan to protect Wisconsin families from this pandemic and get the virus under control. Joe Biden will never give up on the people of Wisconsin. He has a plan to defeat this pandemic and build back better than before — by listening to the scientists, rebuilding the middle class, ensuring the future is made in America by American workers, and ensuring access to affordable health care for all Americans."
