MADISON, Wis. — National Public Lands Day and National Hunting and Fishing Day are coming up Saturday, Sept. 26.

There are more than six million acres of public lands available for recreation in Wisconsin, providing Wisconsinites and visitors an incredible array of opportunities to hunt, fish, hike and so much more.

The Department of Natural Resources is offering media interviews ahead of this national day of celebration with Keith Warnke, division administrator of Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

Warnke can speak on a variety of topics, including:

- The importance of our state's public lands
- Various ways you can support the preservation and enhancement of our public lands
- Upcoming hunting and fishing opportunities
