Today, the Democratic National Committee is releasing a new voter education video featuring former President Barack Obama, who encourages Wisconsinites to visit IWillVote.com to learn about the different options to cast their ballot and make a plan to vote today.

“So much is at stake in this election — from getting the pandemic under control to building a fairer economy to taking on climate change to protecting our health care,” President Obama says in the video. “History shows that the easiest way to make sure that you and your friends vote is to make a plan. And when it comes to voting this year, having a plan has never been more important.”

The video highlights how, in Wisconsin, voters have several options to conveniently cast their ballot. Wisconsinites can vote early in-person starting on October 20; return their requested ballot by mail, in-person, or at an official drop box; or vote in-person on Election Day.
