MILWAUKEE – Jason Fields, current state lawmaker and candidate for Milwaukee Comptroller, today issued the following statement following his primary election victory:

“I’m honored to have received such a strong outpouring of support from across the City of Milwaukee.

“We earned 43% of the vote and took first place by a twelve-point margin. People in Milwaukee are ready to move forward from politics and the same status quo.

“Since I announced my candidacy to be Milwaukee’s next Comptroller, I’ve spent my time earning votes in every neighborhood. I’ve never been shy about who I am, my personal struggles, or my redemption.

“Last night the voters in Milwaukee had a real choice, and they chose the best option to take them in a new direction.

“I’m looking forward to the conversations and debate with Aycha Sawya, I thank

Alex Brower for his dedication to our city, and I look forward even more to being Milwaukee's next Comptroller."
