

State's top election official says clerks do not have enough supplies for mail-in election

Posted on Monday, Mar 30, 2020

Today's Midday podcast covers Wisconsin Elections Commission Administrator Meagan Wolfe telling commissioners that local clerks do not have enough supplies for a mail-in only election hours after Gov. Tony Evers called for every registered voter to be sent an absentee ballot. Stephanie Hoff and Pat Poblete discuss both of the weekend's WEC meetings and the panel's work ahead of the April 7 election.
