

Wisconsin Foundation, Alumni Association: 2020 U.S. election's influence on foreign policy

Posted on Friday, Nov 13, 2020

>> WisPolitics is now on the State Affairs network. Get custom keyword notifications, bill tracking and all WisPolitics content. Get the app or access via desktop.

MADISON, WI (November 13, 2020) — There was very little discussion of foreign policy issues during the run-up to the 2020 presidential election. Yet, the person who sits in the White House has a profound influence on American foreign policy. In the aftermath of the election, what changes are we likely to see in American foreign policy? Find out from an award-winning UW-Madison faculty member at this timely, virtual event. During this presentation, which will be accompanied by a Q & A session, you'll examine the ways in which the president influences American foreign policy.

Featured guest: Jon Pevehouse, Vilas Distinguished Achievement Professor, UW-Madison's Department of Political Science and the La Follette School of Public Affairs.

Pevehouse's research interests lie in international relations, including American foreign policy, international organizations, trade agreements, and political methodology, including time-series analysis. He has received several teaching awards, including the Chancellor's Distinguished Teaching Award. He is the recipient of the Karl Deutsch Award, an international award given to the scholar under age 40 who has made the most significant contribution to the study of international relations. He has also served as the editor of the leading professional journal in the field, International Organization.

When: Thursday, November 19, at 1:30 p.m. CST

Cost: Free

More Details: Registration is required to receive the link for the live event.

For more information: uwalumni.com/event/enrichment-foreign-policy/