[Waukesha, WI] – At the start of November, Rebecca Kleefisch’s campaign for governor launched an effort to recruit Republican poll workers for local county parties across Wisconsin. At its conclusion this week, Kleefisch announced that her team identified more than 600 potential poll workers for county parties to include on the lists they submit to their clerks.

“Election integrity starts with community members serving at the polls who ensure that our election process is conducted freely, fairly, and according to Wisconsin law,” Rebecca Kleefisch said in a statement. “I’m incredibly proud of my team’s efforts to help county parties identify more poll workers to protect the ballot box on Election Day in 2022.”

The deadline for county parties to submit a list of poll workers was November 30, however, there are still opportunities to serve as part of Rebecca’s election integrity efforts.
