In case you missed it, Ron Johnson last Friday expressed deep disappointment that his personal net worth has "gone up only double" since he joined the U.S. Senate in 2011.

According to estimates, Johnson's net worth has risen from roughly $23.76 million in 2011 to about $48.03 million in 2020. Over that time period, Johnson has worked to save his biggest billionaire backers hundreds of millions in tax breaks, all while he "[personally benefited from \[the\] tax change he sought.](#)"

More recently, Johnson has taken heat over the last month for telling Wisconsin families he won't work to lower child care costs, and for declining to fight to keep 1,000 good-paying jobs in his own hometown.
