MADISON, Wis. — Today, Governor Tony Evers' campaign launched a new ad highlighting a troubling pattern of sexual harassment and assault at the Michels' Corporation, outlining how Tim Michel's company was sued multiple times over this behavior in the workplace.

Tim Michels has continuously touted his ties with the Michels Corporation, describing himself as being "responsible for everything" at Michels Corp. Michels has tied his company so closely to his campaign, that they even share the same logo. Culture starts at the top, and these disturbing allegations show Michels can't be trusted to lead Wisconsin.

Read more about how Michels' agenda is too radical and divisive for Wisconsin at timmichelsfacts.com.

Tony for Wisconsin: "Culture"

At a company the culture comes from the top.

Tim Michels' company has been sued numerous times over sexual assault and harassment in the workplace.

Women who worked for Michels company said they were groped, assaulted, and pressured to have sex with their bosses.

Higher ups at Michels dismissed the women as liars and even fired those who spoke out.

Is that what we need for Wisconsin?

Tim Michels, too radical, too divisive.
