MADISON, Wis — In case you missed it, Governor Tony Evers was in Milwaukee on Monday, celebrating the opening of Komatsu's new south harbor campus. This $285 million project was supported partly by the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation (WEDC) with the hope of providing more than 1,000 jobs.

"With more than 135 years of history in Milwaukee, Komatsu is demonstrating exactly how important it is for global companies to continue to invest in Wisconsin and exactly why they should," said Gov. Evers. "With well-connected infrastructure, hardworking people, strategic state investments in education and job training, and the quality of life we offer here—Wisconsin is full of potential."

This campus brings manufacturing and research centers, which will produce major components for mining shovels and drills. Gov. Evers and the WEDC have funded multiple projects that bring job training and opportunities to areas across the state and Gov. Evers has invested $130 million in skills training and workforce development programs that would boost Wisconsin's workforce and make the state more prosperous.
