The Princeton Review this week released its list of 209 Best Value Colleges for 2022 — Marquette University was again named to the list.

Out of 650 colleges and universities the Princeton Review evaluated for this year's list, the 209 schools chosen are those the education services group recommends as offering the best ROI (return on investment). According to the Princeton Review, the group's ROI rating tallies and their selection process considered more than 40 data points, broadly covering academics, affordability and career preparation.

Additionally, the Princeton Review ranked Marquette 12th nationally among private schools in the Best Schools for Internships category and 86th for return on investment. Marquette is also ranked sixth in the nation for job placement by Zippia, according to U.S. Department of Education data.

“The schools we chose as our Best Value Colleges for 2022 are a select group: they comprise only about 7% of the nation's four-year undergraduate institutions,” said Rob Franek, editor-in-chief of The Princeton Review. “We commend their administrators, faculties, staff and alumni for all they are doing to educate their students and guide them to success in their careers. These colleges are also exceptional for the generous amount of financial aid they award to students with need and/or for their comparatively low cost of attendance.”
