The Operating Engineers Local 139, the North Central States Regional Council of Carpenters (NCSRCC) and the Wisconsin Laborers' District Council are proud to endorse Bryan Steil in his reelection bid for Wisconsin's First Congressional District this November.

Steil is a strong supporter of the men and women in the building trades - a commitment he has demonstrated through his vote in support of the Davis-Bacon Act throughout his time in Congress. Through his efforts on the Middle Class Jobs Caucus and the Future Work Caucus, Steil's dedication to the workers building Wisconsin has put the State on the right path.

"Our members build Wisconsin and know the importance of getting a job done right the first time - something Representative Steil understands from his time in the private sector," said Terry McGowan, President/Business Manager of Operating Engineers Local 139. "As we continue to grow our organization, we are looking for elected leaders, like Steil, with the courage to embrace policies like Davis-Bacon prevailing wages that support working people."

"Representative Steil's leadership and support of Davis-Bacon prevailing wages has contributed to the preservation of living standards for our union's members and their families, as well as provided the stability for the construction industry where contractors will compete for projects based on skill, and not on those who can put together the cheapest workforce," added Kent Miller, President/Business Manager of Wisconsin Laborers' District Council.

"The Carpenters believe that we should back candidates based on their record of support of our members and their families," said Andrew Disch, Political Director of NCSRCC. "While serving in Congress, Representative Steil has been a strong ally and partner on many issues, notably Davis-Bacon. His record of support for our members has earned our organization's support."
