Washington, D.C. – In the latest wave of public polls, Senator Ron Johnson has pulled ahead of Lt. Gov. Mandela Barnes.

According to Axios:

By the numbers: In Wisconsin, Barnes trails Johnson by five points in a new poll conducted for the AARP by Biden pollster John Anzalone and Trump pollster Tony Fabrizio.

- A Fox News poll released this week, which showed Johnson ahead by four points, found 44% of Wisconsin voters believing Barnes' views are "too extreme" — a point higher than those who viewed Johnson the same way. The share of voters who now view Barnes as too extreme spiked 14 points in the last month.
- Johnson's supporters are much more committed to supporting their candidate than Barnes backers, according to the Fox News poll. Only half of Barnes votes said they supported their candidate "enthusiastically."

Mandela Barnes is a dangerous Democrat and we will continue to let the voters know.
