Opportunity Wisconsin calls on Senators Baldwin and Johnson to support this historic investment in our economy, climate, health care, and middle class

MADISON, Wis.—As the U.S. Senate prepares to vote on the Inflation Reduction Act of 2022, Opportunity Wisconsin is calling on Senators Tammy Baldwin and Ron Johnson to support the bill, which would make historic investments in our economy, climate, health care and middle class.

Meghan Roh, Opportunity Wisconsin Program Director:

“In the coming days, our elected representatives will have the opportunity to take a historic vote to lower costs for Wisconsin workers and families. Not only does the Inflation Reduction Act lower health care and energy costs, while also lowering the deficit, but it also cracks down on corporations to make sure they pay their fair share in taxes.”

“While he’s been in the U.S. Senate, Ron Johnson has looked out for himself and people like him, at the expense of working Wisconsinites. Now, he has the opportunity to vote for a bill that will help level the playing field and give Wisconsin workers and families a fair shot to get ahead. We’re calling on both Senator Johnson and Senator Tammy Baldwin to support this bill when it comes up for a vote in the Senate.”
