WASHINGTON, DC – Today, Congressman Bryan Steil announced the nomination of 16 high school students from Wisconsin's First District for appointments to attend U.S. Service Academies.

“Each year we have exceptional students apply for a nomination to serve our nation at a U.S. Service Academy. It is an honor to meet with each of these students and hear about their interest in serving our country. The nomination process recognizes students' character, leadership, and academic achievements. I'm proud to nominate 16 students for this year's Service Academy application process.”

Part of the U.S. Service Academy application process is obtaining a nomination from an authorized nominating source, such as a Member of Congress. Acceptance to the academies is highly competitive. Receiving a nomination is the important first step, however, the actual appointment to a service academy is determined by each academy itself. Appointments for Wisconsin's First Congressional District will be announced at a later date.
