WASHINGTON — On Tuesday, Sen. Ron Johnson (R-Wis.), ranking member of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, sent a letter to Secretary of Defense Lloyd Austin demanding confirmation that the Department of Defense (DoD) complied with the senator's January 24, 2022 request to preserve all records contained on the Defense Medical Epidemiology Database (DMED).

The senator wrote, "I was disappointed to see that instead of immediately responding to the American people through their elected representative, DoD apparently decided to prioritize a response to PolitiFact about allegations relating to the same database."

The senator also raised concerns that following his record preservation request, DMED was taken offline to "identify and correct" alleged problems on the database.

The senator continued, "Let me be clear, any attempt to alter data contained within DMED without preserving all records before and after these changes are made to the database will completely undermine my preservation request and will be considered an active effort to mislead Congress."

This is the third letter the senator has sent to DoD regarding DMED.

February 8, 2022

The Honorable Lloyd J. Austin III

Secretary

Department of Defense

Dear Secretary Austin:

On January 24, 2022, I sent you a letter requesting that you preserve all records referring, relating, or reported to the Defense Medical Epidemiology Database (DMED).[1] To date, the Department of Defense (DoD) has refused to confirm whether it has complied with this record preservation request.

I was disappointed to see that instead of immediately responding to the American people through their elected representative, DoD apparently decided to prioritize a response to PolitiFact about allegations relating to the same database. On January 31, 2022, a week after I sent my letter to you, DoD responded to reports about increased diagnoses of medical conditions in DMED in 2021 compared to the previous five years. Specifically, a DoD spokesperson reportedly told PolitiFact that the data in DMED “was incorrect for the years 2016-2020.”[2]

In addition to responding to PolitiFact before responding to a U.S. Senator, DoD also made a concerning statement about its current handling of DMED records. DoD’s spokesperson reportedly said that the DMED system is now offline to “identify and correct the root-cause of the data corruption.”[3]

Let me be clear, any attempt to alter data contained within DMED without preserving all records before and after these changes are made to the database will completely undermine my preservation request and will be considered an active effort to mislead Congress.

I demand you immediately respond to my January 24, 2022 letter by no later than February 10, 2022, and explain what steps you have taken to preserve all records before and after DMED was taken offline referring, relating, and reported to that database. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Ron Johnson

Ranking Member

Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations
