PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, WI – It's been weeks since convicted murderer Terrence Shaw was released back into State Senator Brad Pfaff's district, living in an unlicensed daycare according to a neighbor. The victim, an Onalaska nurse and mother of two, was brutally raped and murdered in 1982. Neither her immediate family nor the Onalaska police chief were notified of Shaw moving back into the community although Shaw is a registered sex offender.

Derrick Van Orden released the following statement on Pfaff's silence:

“Brad Pfaff was just elected to the state senate in 2020 and is proving that he will put politics above the safety of his constituents. Now that he has demonstrated that he will not protect women and children in his own home town, does anyone think he will protect their interests in DC? The time for career politicians like Pfaff that refuse to hold leadership accountable is over, the safety of our families depends on it.”
