MADISON, Wis. – The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) today announced the summer issue of Wisconsin Natural Resources magazine is now available in print and online with stories to celebrate Wisconsin's outdoors being open for all.

The latest issue highlights organizations, people and resources helping to ensure Wisconsin's natural resources are available and accessible to everyone. Read about groups such as Cycling Without Age, Midwest Crappie Hunters and Wisconsin Women in Conservation who are each taking steps to work toward this goal.

Find your adventure at several state properties celebrating milestone anniversaries this year, and keep summer safety top-of-mind with tips on sunscreen and dealing with ticks. Gather around the grill and learn outdoor cooking skills from award-winning Wisconsin chef Luke Zahm.

In the Kids Corner, groovy kids can try tie-dying with the help of all-natural dyes made from kitchen scraps and backyard finds.

Plus, learn how land managers are fighting to protect sharp-tailed grouse and read up on three great state properties for birdwatching.

Find these stories and so much more in the summer issue of Wisconsin Natural Resources magazine.
