

Redistricting expert John Johnson talks future of legislative redistricting

Posted on Friday, Oct 13, 2023

This week's Capitol Chats podcast features an interview with redistricting expert John Johnson. The Marquette University Law School Lubar Center research fellow says the state Supreme Court could take a few different paths to tackling how to redraw the state's legislative boundaries if it rules against the current maps. He said if the court draws new districts, he would expect to see "a map that bears no relation to what we currently have."