TOWN OF ELBA - Farmer and conservative activist Nate Pollnow today announced the endorsement from a strong group of state senators and representatives who are supporting his campaign for Secretary of State to bring greater transparency, accountability, and taxpayer-focused leadership to the office.

These endorsements reflect broad and growing support across Wisconsin for Nate's mission to turn the Secretary of State's office into a watchdog that makes government more open and accessible to the citizens of the state. Nate's new endorsements include: Sen. John Jagler

Sen. Romaine Quinn

Sen. Pat Testin

Sen. Cory Tomczyk

Rep. Elijah Behnke

Rep. Mark Born

Rep. Alex Dallman

Rep. Barb Dittrich

Rep. Bob Donovan

Rep. Chanz Green

Rep. Rick Gundrum

Rep. Scott Krug

Rep. Dave Maxey

Rep. William Penterman

Rep. Ron Tusler

Rep. Travis Tranel

Rep. Duke Tucker

Rep. Bob Wittke

Nate is a second-generation beef farmer, auctioneer, small businessman, and past Chairman of the Town of Elba. He is running to clean up the mess in Madison and restore trust in government, make public records easy to access, reduce bureaucratic hurdles, and ensure the office serves as “Secretary FOR the state” by working directly for taxpayers rather than against them.

“Like many Wisconsinites I am fed up with state government: tired of excessive red tape, hidden information, and decisions made behind closed doors. The Secretary of State should be the people’s champion for openness by delivering fast, clear access to legislative records, bill signings, administrative rules, and more,” Nate said. “I am deeply grateful to these dedicated senators and representatives for their endorsement and for joining me in this important effort to make government transparent and accountable once again.”
