State Senate Calendar and the Assembly

Senator Steve Nass (R-Whitewater) released the following statement regarding the State Senate calendar for Tuesday, March 20th, containing more than 100 proposals:

“This week the State Senate will address many significant issues including juvenile justice reform, school safety funding, the process of placing sexually violent persons, and creation of a child tax credit. Senators will vote to represent their constituents and make changes to some of the bills on our calendar in the same way that members of the Assembly did in late February.

Despite the decrees issued by the Assembly Speaker, the State Senate will exercise its responsibility to consider legislation and adopt amendments, if necessary. I am confident that rank-and-file members of the Assembly are more than willing to return to Madison to resolve these important issues. I can only hope the Assembly Speaker will reconsider his my-way-or-the-highway approach to ending this legislative session.”
