

Wisconsin Medical Society

For Immediate Release
August 29, 2018

Contact
Kendi Parvin, 608.442.3748
kendi.parvin@wismed.org

Physician burnout ‘present and growing’

Statement from Wisconsin Medical Society CEO Bud Chumbley, MD, MBA following today’s Legislative Council Study Committee on Direct Primary Care meeting, which included a presentation on physician burnout.

“There’s no doubt that the trendlines regarding physician burnout are troubling in Wisconsin. It’s present and it’s growing.”

“The Society thanks committee co-chairs Sen. Alberta Darling and Rep. John Nygren for asking us to share our latest physician survey results regarding burnout. Improving the medical environment so physicians and other caregivers can best take care of their patients must be a health care priority both now and after the November elections. The Society is happy to lead this charge and work with hospital systems, clinics and policymakers in both Madison and Washington, D.C. to find ways to improve both physician and patient experience with our health care system.”

###

With over 12,500 members dedicated to the best interests of their patients, the Wisconsin Medical Society is the largest association of medical doctors in the state and a trusted source for health policy leadership since 1841.