Oneida Tribal Chairman Delivers State of Tribes Address to Legislature

Madison...Today, Oneida Tribal Nation Chairman Tehassi Hill delivered the Wisconsin State of the Tribes address to the State Assembly and Senate. This speech is an annual tradition whereby a leader of one of Wisconsin's 11 federally-recognized Native American tribes provides an update on the work of tribal governments in the state and shares their legislative priorities. Representative John Macco (R-Ledgeview) released the following statement:

"The Oneida Nation has been – and continues to be – an integral part of our Green Bay-area community. They have been an active supporter of the University of Wisconsin – Green Bay, which is located in the 88th Assembly District, by generating over $240,000 for joint programming," said Rep. Macco.

"I am pleased that Chairman Hill was selected to give the Wisconsin State of the Tribes address to the legislature. I look forward to continuing to work with him and his colleagues in the future," concluded Rep. Macco.
