MEDIA ADVISORY

Brown County Executive to Declare March Social Worker Month
Streckenbach Highlighting Essential Contributions During Challenging Times

(Brown County, Wis.) – Brown County Executive Troy Streckenbach will officially proclaim March as Social Worker Month and present this honor to those Social Workers employed by Brown County and thank them for their important contributions to our community.

Over the past year, many people have honored and recognized essential workers for their dedication to service during the COVID-19 pandemic. However, the men and women who work in various organizations throughout Brown County are often overlooked. Social Workers are one of the largest mental health care service providers in the United States and their jobs have become increasingly difficult given the circumstances of the pandemic.

Streckenbach will be present this proclamation to several Social Work staff, including Brown County Health and Human Services Executive Director Erik Pritzl and Brown County Social Work Supervisor Marc Seidl.
