Conservative Russ Jones Announces Bid For Washington County Judge

Slinger – Attorney Russell Jones formally announced his candidacy for Washington County Circuit Court, Branch One today.

Jones released the following statement:

“After much discussion with my family and other members of the community I have decided to formally announce my bid to be Washington County’s newest judge. I believe the citizens of Washington County deserve a judge that is aligned with their values and not handpicked by political forces in Madison. Too many of us see the justice system as corrupt or “two-tiered” and I want to help restore faith in our courts.

We need a judge to give back to the community and transform how the judiciary interacts with the public. In my court justice would be even handed and applied equally. I am guided by a judicially conservative philosophy and will apply the law through a constitutional framework. I will rule on cases in an unbiased and fair manner, ensuring my docket runs efficiently. This will guarantee timely access to the legal process and preserve our community resources.

I vow to defend the rule of law and the ideals of justice. I will stand up to liberal judicial activists who seek to use the judiciary for their political gain. As your judge, I will protect the community, enforce our laws, and abide by the constitution.”
