Stacey Klein: Pfaff Marches to Orders from Madison, Obstructs PFAS Relief Again

TREMPEALEAU—State Sen. Brad “PFAS Pfaff” was given an opportunity today that elected officials rarely enjoy: a do-over. But instead of doing the right thing for the people of the 32nd Senate District, he once again chose his radical Madison friends and rejected PFAS relief that residents of the Town of Campbell and throughout the Coulee Region are counting on.

The vote was part of Senate Republicans’ effort to override Gov. Tony Evers’ politically motivated veto of Senate Bill 312, which the Governor has cynically used as a part of a political messaging campaign in advance of this fall’s elections. Pfaff, who diligently follows his marching orders from Madison at any cost, fell into line yet again.

In response to Pfaff’s failure to do the right thing for the people back home, Stacey Klein (R-Trempealeau), candidate for the 32nd State Senate District, issued the following statement:

“Brad Pfaff had an opportunity today to show the people back home that he can be relied upon to do the right thing, eventually. Even if that means disappointing his friends in the Evers administration. Even if it means saying no to his radical Madison environmentalist friends once in a while.

“When given the chance to do the right thing, PFAS Pfaff chose politics over people for the second time in six short months. Western Wisconsin deserves better than a back-bench yes-man—especially when it comes to critical matters of public health and safety.

“Was this bill perfect? They rarely are. But it was a big step in the right direction by opening up a spigot of relief funds while preventing countless small shops from being bankrupted by environmentalist bureaucrats from Madison. This bill was supported by the Wisconsin Towns Association, the League of Wisconsin Municipalities and the Wisconsin Counties Association. PFAS Pfaff’s choice to push a political narrative at the expense of the people back home and ignore the needs expressed by local government is shameful.”
