WISCONSIN - Bryan Steil failed to protect global Democracy and America's leadership as a global superpower for peace and voted against the Ukraine Support Act. Passed by a bipartisan majority of the House, the Act authorizes sending up to $9 billion in security funding and military loans along with an additional economic sanctions package to Ukraine to support their fight against Russian aggression

Peter Burgelis, candidate for Congress in Wisconsin's First Congressional District, released this statement today.

"Bryan Steil has again turned his back to the Ukrainian people. His vote against military aid and sanctions for Putin's continued unprovoked aggression is a direct threat to Ukraine and global peace. As a first generation Latvian-American whose family fled Russian aggression, I understand the fear of war. My family survived because of the generosity of the American people, and I'll always be grateful. When I am in Congress, I'll fight to stand firm with Ukraine. America should never abandon its allies in their greatest time of need."
